Scientific Manuscript Editing and Journal Publication Support Systems

Summary

Manuscript writing for journal review and publication is a skillset that scientists must learn to navigate for successful research outcomes. Especially, preparation of manuscripts for highly-selective journals is a unique challenge. First, I will talk about my perspective on relations between scientists with journals and editors as a former Senior Editor at Cell Press. Then, I will discuss my experiences working with authors (mainly PIs) as an in-house manuscript editor, publication consultant, and writing instructor in RIKEN and the University of Tokyo. Let's go deep into all of these topics.